Through her intimate writings, readers gain an unparalleled perspective on the horrors of war, the complexities of adolescence, and the enduring power of hope.

The Origin of Anne Frank's Diary

Anne Frank began writing her diary in 1942, shortly after her family went into hiding in a concealed annex above her father's office in Amsterdam. The diary, which she affectionately named "Kitty," quickly became her confidante, a place where she could express her thoughts, fears, dreams, and frustrations. Despite living under constant threat, Anne's writing reveals a remarkable blend of youthful optimism and mature reflection.

The diary was not initially intended for public consumption. Anne's candid entries were personal and raw, capturing the day-to-day reality of life in hiding. However, after the Frank family was betrayed and arrested in 1944, Anne's diary survived, thanks to Miep Gies, one of the trusted helpers who preserved the pages. Posthumously published by her father Otto Frank, the diary has since become one of the most important documents of the Holocaust.
